International Review of Modern Sociology, a biannual journal, publishes sociologically related and academically engaging papers, book reviews, comments, rejoinders, and annotated bibliographies. The journal, in particular, welcomes papers with an explicit comparative, cross-cultural, cross-national, or interdisciplinary focus. All submissions must neither be under review elsewhere nor have been previously published.

Articles in the International Review of Modern Sociology represent neither the views of the Editorial Advisory Board nor of any institution that the editors may be affiliated with. The editor assumes responsibility for the final selection of the contents of the journal and reserves the right to reject any material deemed inappropriate for publication.

Responsibility for opinions expressed and for the accuracy of facts published in the articles rest solely with the individual authors. Authors are not paid for accepted manuscripts. The journal assumes no responsibility for damage to or loss of unsolicited manuscripts.

NOTICE TO CONTRIBUTORS

Preparation of Copy

Submitted manuscripts should contain some definable contribution to the fund of sociological knowledge. Short and quality articles (preferably not to exceed 30 typed double spaced pages) including footnotes and references would be preferable to long ones. The final criteria would be quality over quantity, excellence over mediocrity, and originality over redundancy. Manuscripts are evaluated by the editor and selected referees.

The author may submit manuscripts electronically as an attachment to the editor Sunil Kukreja (kukreja@ups.edu) or as hard copy submissions (three copies). The manuscript should include a title page bearing the title of the paper, the author's name and institutional affiliation and address (including e-mail address). This should be followed on a separate page by an abstract of 100-150 words with the title of the paper noted on the top of the abstract page.

In selecting articles for publication, the editor relies on the interpretation and recommendations of the reviewers although they do not bind the editor in the selection process, and the editor makes the final decision. The manuscript review process normally takes 6-8 weeks, and unless the author provides an appropriate self-addressed stamped envelope, hard copy manuscripts are not returned. Manuscripts accepted for publication may be subjected to non-substantive editing.

Before submitting the paper, please prepare a copy according to our journals' format, which includes the following:

1. Type all copies, including indented matter, footnotes, and references, on white bond 8.5 x 11 inch paper, double-spaced, and on one side of the page. Lines should not exceed six inches with one inch margin at top and bottom of the page.
2. All major headings should be capitalized and centered. All sub-headings should be indented five spaces, underlined, and followed by a period. Text immediately follows the sub-heading.
3. Draw each figure in India ink and type each on separate pages. Send copies of figures and tables but retain the originals for transmission to the editor as camera-ready copy when the paper is accepted. Capitalize all letters of the titles of tables and figures. Insert a location note in numerical order in the text, e.g., "Table 1 about here."
4. Footnotes should be used only for substantive comments not included in the main text. They should be numbered serially and typed double-spaced on separate sheets at the end of the text before references.

Format of References in Text

Identify all references to books, monographs, articles, and statistical sources at an appropriate point in the main text by author's last name, year of publication, and pagination where appropriate, all within parentheses. Specify subsequent citations of the same source similarly; do not use "ibid." "op. cit." or "loc. cit"

1. If author's name is in the text, use only year of publication in parentheses, e.g., Lipset (1963). If the author's name is not in the text, include both author's name and year of publication separated by a comma within the parentheses, e.g., (Dahrendorf, 1959).
2. Pagination follows year, separated by a colon, e.g., (Domhoff, 1970: 45-46).
3. With dual authorship give both names; for three or more use "et. al." e.g., (Lipset and Solari, 1967) and (Rosen et. al., 1969).
4. If more than one reference to the same author and year, distinguish between them by use of letters "a,b, . . ." attached to year of publication; (Moskos 1971a).
5. Enclose within a single pair of parentheses a series of references, separated by semi-colons, e.g., (Lang, 1971; Lopreato, 1972; Olsen, 1973).
6. For institutional/organizational authorship provide minimum identification from the beginning of the complete citation, e.g." (American Political Science Association, 1971: 85) and (United States Bureau of the Census, 1972).

Format of References in Appendix

List all entries cited in the text or any other items used to prepare the manuscript alphabetically by author and year of publication in an appendix entitled "REFERENCES". If there is more than one publication by the same author, use year of publication for subsequent citations.

Identify books by author's last name, his first name and middle initial (where appropriate); below author's last name, place, year of publication; title of monograph/ book; place of publication and name of publisher. In case of multiple authorship give full entry including names of all authors. Similarly identify articles by author's name, year of publication, title or article, name of journal, volume number and pages. For typing format see examples below:

GUIDELINES FOR BOOK REVIEWS

Scholarly reviews constitute an indispensable component and invaluable source to the growth of a field, its professional specialists and interested readers in general. Good reviews should be informative and critical of the author's contribution to the field. Normally they should not exceed 1000-1500 words. The following guidelines and editorial policies concerning book reviews should help to make your review beneficial for both author and reader:

- (1) State as comprehensively and parsimoniously as possible the scope, objective and content of the book so that the reader can understand and decide whether or not the book has relevance and value for one's respective interest or discipline.
- (2) When evaluating the book, give detailed documentation for your criticisms, both positive and negative. Comments that a book is "unsophisticated" or "exciting" or "polemic" or "insightful" tell the reader nothing without elaboration and examples.
- (3) Except when necessary to substantiate a criticism of the book, avoid references to your own research or writing. Remember that the purpose of your review is to give a concise synopsis of the author's work and your own critical evaluation of the book. The review should be consistent with the canons of clarity, comprehensiveness, and professional craftsmanship.
- (4) Edited books present a special problem. If there are more than three or four contributions, description and evaluation of each contribution is usually not possible (and in any event is not desirable). Some contributions may be chosen for special criticism or praise or may be mentioned to illustrate general points, but most of the review should describe and evaluate the book as a whole.
- (5) These guidelines are offered not to temper the force of forthright evaluation and criticism but rather to maintain the journal's book reviews at the highest level of quality. Book review manuscripts may be edited slightly to achieve brevity, grammatical accuracy, or stylistic consistency, but we will make every effort to insure that such minor revisions do not in any way alter the content or meaning of the review.

Format of Book Reviews

- (1) The heading should be typed as follows:
The Family in Asia, edited by Man Singh Das and Panos D. Dardis,
New Delhi, India: Vikas Publishing House, 1978. 431 pp. $ 12.00 cloth. $ 6.97 paper.

JOHN E. REVIEWER
ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY, TEMPE

- (1) If you are reviewing several books in one review, please list them alphabetically by author.
- (2) The editors reserve the right to edit reviews for style, conciseness, consistency of punctuation, and unless you request we not do so, for sexist language.
- (3) Please avoid quoting long passages from the book you are reviewing. Paraphrase when possible. Always give the 'page number of the quote.
- (4) Please avoid using references and footnotes. If a quotation from another work is 'absolutely necessary, please incorporate the reference into the text. The form of the reference should be: (Das and Bardis, The Family in Asia, 1978:230).
- (5) Double-space your manuscript, including the heading.
- (6) Do not break words at the end of a line. It is sometimes unclear whether or not the hyphen indicates a compound word.
- (7) Use non-erasable paper.
- (8) If possible, please submit your review electronically. Otherwise send two copies of your review (original and duplicate).
- (9) We would like to discourage reviewers from sending pre-publication copies of their reviews to the author of the book being reviewed. This has created some problems for us in the past.
- (10) Please beat the assigned deadline if possible. The delay between publication of the books and a review is already running far behind what is optimal. If something prevents you from completing the review on time, please let us know and we will try to make an accommodation.
